ABOUT GENERAL SPORTS

General Sports and Entertainment is a multi-faceted sports and entertainment firm with a national reputation for excellence. General Sports was founded with the notion that the most effective way to build a successful business is through developing strong, sound relationships. We are convinced that there is no better way to build strong relationships than through the power of sports and entertainment.

General Sports was founded by Andrew D. Appleby, former Senior Vice President of the Detroit Pistons and Palace Sports and Entertainment. Over the course of 12 years with Palace Sports and Entertainment, Andy turned relationship building into an art form. His experience taught him that stronger relationships could be built by spending one night with clients in a suite at a basketball game than through 10 dinner appointments. That is the power of sports and entertainment.

At General Sports, our mission is to use the power of sports and entertainment to help our clients build relationships with clients, customers, employees and the community. Our clients work with us because of our expertise in customer service and building relationships, because we offer the strongest networking opportunities in the sports and entertainment industry, because of our experience in negotiating and marketing from both sides of the table, and most importantly, because of our ability to maximize the value of their sports and entertainment investments and grow their business. Let General Sports bring the power of sports and entertainment to your bottom line!
